The Fantasy Grounds campaign setting Southlands is designed for the 5E edition of the Pathfinder RPG. It is a fantasy setting inspired by the deserts and deserts of Libya and Egypt, but written for use with any fantasy campaign world. It is compatible with both the Pathfinder and 5E rulesets, and is compatible with the Fantasy Grounds and Game Masters Gang, the same Gangs that run the Southlands also run the Southlands campaign setting. There is a growing campaign world of high fantasy in the deserts of Libya and Egypt, where people are fighting for control of ancient ruins and treasures. Southlands is a fascinating world full of adventure. The place also has a few problems. A massive drought and lack of rain has made it harder to find water. The constant threat of sandstorms is a danger to those in the city of Nuria Natal, just outside the perimeter of the Pyramid of Tiberesh. The capitol, Per-Bastet, lies on the other side of the River Nuria in a city called Shatmaal, and the river itself is falling low, while the water now that comes down from the desert is often full of silt and toxic chemicals. An earthquake in the south has left more and more people displaced in the desert, while the people of Nuria Natal are suffering as water becomes an increasingly expensive and scarce commodity. This adventure was written to help the Game Master set the tone and create a backstory for the various factions that control the region. It was designed by Wolfgang Baur, a long-time German Game Master and D&D enthusiast, with many years of experience as a Game Master running multiple modules with multiple players. Game Content: The adventure features a dungeon crawl, and a complete storyline. The Tomb of Tiberesh includes, but isn't limited to, all content listed below. You may modify and play with the story as you see fit, of course. You may also choose to start the adventure as a "pick up where you left off" adventure, the same is true of the "Oasis of the Ancients" adventure. The Tomb of Tiberesh includes 5 location tiles depicting the Tomb and the surrounding area. Tomb of Tiberesh includes all written content for the adventure as well as the five location tiles found in the box. Location Tiles Tomb of Tiberesh includes all written materials for the adventure as well as the five location tiles found in the box. Tomb of Tiberesh includes five
