Somatic missense mutations in the human fibroblast growth factor receptor 2 gene causing Crouzon syndrome and severe acrofacial dysostosis. Crouzon syndrome is an autosomal dominant disorder characterized by several craniofacial anomalies. We previously identified a G127E mutation in the human fibroblast growth factor receptor 2 (FGFR2) gene in a Crouzon patient. In this study, we screened other Crouzon patients for mutations in the FGFR2 gene. Mutations were found in the FGFR2 gene in 15 out of 17 patients (71.4%). One mutation, G191S, was present in all patients with this type of disorder. The G191S mutation is a novel one, and the change of amino acid at codon 191 is expected to be a neutral one because G191 is encoded by an ATG codon. The other 14 mutations were known as missense mutations and included M252V (7/17, 41.2%) and D250H (1/17, 5.8%). In Crouzon patients, the prevalence of these mutations was surprisingly high. These findings suggest that these mutations, at least a part of them, are responsible for Crou

Today I hit the limit of 50 instances but the EC2 guy showed up and I had to leave before I found out the hard way.

So I deleted the instance from the EC2 app, waited at least 5 minutes, then it killed itself. Is there a way to have it wait longer? It was working fine when I last turned it on but since I deleted it, it has stopped scaling up again. A: I don't think you can change the timeout period, but there are other ways. Check the CloudWatch Console You can monitor the number of running instances, from there you can determine if there are enough to meet your quotas and decide what to do. If you want a more detailed analysis, which is detailed and real-time, use the Server Activity monitor

Opposition emerges to Obama's new military attack on Syria: As many as 100,000 US troops will be involved in the new bombing campaign against Syria as the US prepares for a long war in the Middle East. Obama, a war-monger
