Now, if you don't know how to use Photoshop, this article is for you. In this Photoshop tutorial, I'll show you the basic and intermediate steps to starting out with the most popular image manipulation program on the market. Step 1. Opening Photoshop from Windows Before you can start doing anything, first you need to open Photoshop. To open Photoshop from Windows, click the Start menu's photo button and then click the blue Windows icon. From the "Windows Start Menu" page, choose the "Utilities" tab at the top and then select "Open Photoshop." A new window should open with a Photoshop icon in the upper right corner. Click this icon to start the application. Step 2. Installing Photoshop on Mac Download the latest version of Photoshop from the Adobe Download website. If you don't know how to do that, see the Photoshop download page. When the download is complete, click the downloaded file and press the Return key. This will bring up the "Open" or "Run" dialog box. In the "Open" dialog box, click "Open" and Photoshop should start. Step 3. Checking Out Photoshop The Photoshop application is pretty straightforward, and only a few things are different depending on whether you're on Windows or a Mac. In the far upper right corner of the screen, click the Image and Layers tab. If you haven't created a new document before, you'll see a small box to the right that says "New." In that box, select the white button that says, "New." The selected image file should now have a white "New Document" box instead of the blank box that you had before. It's important to note, though, that the white box will only be displayed while you have an actual Photoshop document open. If you have no open Photoshop document, you'll need to create one. To create a new document, click the New Document button in the corner of the image window and select the white box to create a new document. A new, blank document should open. Now, click the File button to load the "Open a File" dialog box. In the "Open" dialog box, click the "Open or Create" button. From the "Open or Create" dialog box, select the white rectangle to locate a new Photoshop file. Depending on how many layers you've selected, you'll have an additional menu to

Q: Error when sending variable to sqlite using python So I'm making a program to send values from a list to a specific column in a table. Here is my code: first_name = input("What is your first name?: ") last_name = input("What is your last name?: ") address = input("What is your address?: ") phone = input("What is your phone number?: ") motive = input("What is your motive?: ") drink = input("What do you drink?: ") sex = input("Are you male or female?: ") email = input("What is your email?: ") sqlite_query = "INSERT INTO TABLE " + table_name + " VALUES (?)" connection = sqlite3.connect("viewdb_test.db") cursor = connection.cursor() cursor.execute(sqlite_query, (first_name, last_name, address, phone, motive, drink, sex, email)) print('1') However when running it through python, it comes back with this error: sqlite3.InterfaceError: Error binding parameter 0 - probably unsupported type. It seems that the way I'm doing it is not valid. What should I do instead? Thanks. A: Cursors cannot handle lists. Executing a query using a list would be something like: sqlite_query = "INSERT INTO TABLE %s VALUES (%s, %s, %s, %s, %s, %s, %s, %s)" %(table_name, first_name, last_name, address, phone, motive, drink, sex, email) then call: cursor.execute(sqlite_query, (first_name, last_name, address, phone, motive, drink, sex, email)) Tag: stem cell Share this: Like this: Posts navigation About Dr. Dianna Clairmont, DVM, DVM, PhD Dr. Clairmont is a licensed veterinarian and a doctoral candidate in interdisciplinary biology at the University of New England. Q: .map(n => n + 1) gives 'undefined' in forEach statement Good day. I want to see my list changing into array values to see through. and made this code to it. ForEach(async(item) => { await item.ref(client, res => { console.log(res); }); }) I expected that console.log(res) will log final, but only got undefined. so I searched for this problem. I found that I'm not understanding the function of map or forEach. I'm not using array, but map() or forEach() is same with the array. If you need my code, I gave it below. const Client = require('../models/client'); const client = new Client(); async function changeStatus() { console.log('start') await client.update({status: 'active'}); console.log('finish') } const array = [1, 2, 3, 4]; async function changeArray() { console.log('start') await array.map(n => n + 1); console.log('finish') } forEach(changeArray()); forEach(changeStatus()); I don't why that I only get undefined. P.S. : My client is just created by new. Thank you. A: Your code is actually executed like this: let array = [1, 2, 3, 4]; async function changeArray() { console.log('start') await array.map(n => n + 1); console.log('finish') } forEach(changeArray()); forEach(changeStatus()); Please note the let keyword. You probably want to initialize your array declaration like this: let array = []; Comparison of criteria for hCG production and response after hCG stimulation in IVF-ET.
