, which opened on Friday in limited release in L.A., has already recouped more than $110,000 in its first weekend, distributor Annapurna announced Monday. But it was also a commercial disaster, despite being widely touted as a “great comedy.” In the first three days it played, more than 50% of the audience for the house specialty at the Arclight were cell phone scrolled through their contact lists. There were fights in the audience, the lobby and in the street. A cab driver accosted a man as he entered the theater and hurled obscenities at him while friends of the man who was attacked screamed at him to leave. Last week, Annapurna moved the picture, in its widest release yet, to Laemmle’s Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, where it will play until May 21. The film’s New York marketing partner, Marketplaces Entertainment, pushed for the move to Cedars. Last weekend the film played mainly at Laemmle theaters in New York and L.A., and most failed to recoup their money. The total occupancy at Laemmle theaters was 43% — a 10th of the percentage Annapurna had projected. Laemmle’s Cedars number remains to be determined. The film, starring Eddie Redmayne as a man in love with a woman who has variously been portrayed by Scarlett Johansson, Rachel McAdams, and Felicity Jones, has been sold to 160 territories. The film, toplined by Redmayne and Stallone, costs $40 million and was made for a modest $11 million. “We were unable to deliver as planned,” said Annapurna co-founder Megan Ellison in a Monday phone interview. “This is beyond our control. We’re not saying that people didn’t like the movie. I would say we had large audiences and I think you understand what they were seeking. Everyone likes different things.” The studio’s chief, Annapurna Entertainment chief business strategist Erik Bruckheimer, said in an interview Monday, “Obviously the film was a fluke and that’s not a great thing to say. We’re disappointed and when you work on a movie with a company you're really invested in, you're disappointed and you feel a bit of grief.
