Effects of ocular factors on biometric changes after cataract surgery. To describe the effects of ocular factors on refraction and axial length changes after cataract surgery. In a prospective, nonrandomized, comparative case series, 52 patients who underwent cataract surgery were followed for up to 1 year. One randomly selected eye was included in each patient. Eyes were assigned to receive one of three types of intraocular lens implantation: anterior chamber (AC), posterior chamber (PC), or iris claw (IC). Preoperative, postoperative, and final biometric measurements were obtained by means of A-scan ultrasonography. The magnitude of change in all parameters after cataract surgery was significantly smaller in eyes with advanced grades of nuclear sclerosis and age-related cataract. The axial length decreased by the greatest amount in patients who had the most dense cataract. Age-related cataract significantly affected the magnitude of change in most biometric parameters after cataract surgery. Axial length change was greater in eyes with advanced grades of nuclear sclerosis. Surgeons must perform cataract surgery with respect to the patient's refractive errors, as well as the cataract density.⁶ killed, 32 wounded in Kabul bombings
KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — A suicide bomber struck near the entrance of a hospital in the Afghan capital on Monday, killing at least six people, including a doctor, as more than two dozen people were wounded in a series of attacks across the country. The U.N. Assistance Mission in Afghanistan put out a statement confirming that a doctor at the trauma center of the Kabul hospital was killed and two other wounded when a suicide bomber struck an entrance to the complex. The assault occurred as hundreds of Afghan security forces backed by U.S. Special Forces were guarding schools in the capital and elsewhere following a suicide car bombing that killed more than 80 people on Sunday in the town of Ghazni, northwest of Kabul. “This is a time of great pain for the people of Afghanistan. It is a time of great sadness and concern for all Afghans,” said Gen. John Nicholson, the top U.S. commander in the country, adding that he had directed all U.S. forces to Afghanistan to provide assistance to the people. U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo condemned the attacks. “Our prayers are with the people of Afghanistan and the families of the victims

Plasma BNP and NT-proBNP in the follow-up of patients with severe congestive heart failure. We aimed to study the prognostic value of plasma B-type natriuretic peptide (BNP) and its active form, N-terminal proBNP (NT-proBNP), in patients with severe congestive heart failure (CHF). BNP and NT-proBNP were measured at diagnosis of CHF in 152 patients admitted to the intensive care unit. All patients were followed for a mean of 915 days after discharge. At hospital discharge, 66 patients were alive, and 86 had died. No differences between survivors and nonsurvivors in plasma BNP and NT-proBNP levels at hospital discharge were detected. NT-proBNP measurements during hospitalization were informative in 90% of subjects. BNP levels ≥ 4000 pg/mL at discharge and ≥ 700 pg/mL during the stay were associated with a significantly lower probability of survival at 1-year follow-up. NT-proBNP measurements were more informative than BNP levels with respect to survival. Our results show that the change in BNP and NT-proBNP levels between discharge and day 30 was an independent predictor of long-term mortality in patients with CHF.
