The manhunt to find the suspect or suspects responsible for an attempted church bombing in the Northern Territory continues to intensify today with police hunting for a massive 20kg bag of explosives. About 500 kg of explosives were found in a woman's car in Darwin, with police saying the material was "highly dangerous". Two people - a man and a woman aged 20 and 19 respectively - have been taken into custody in connection with the attempted bombing. Powder, batteries and detonators were found at the Queen's Birthday long weekend in Darwin. Police said the bag of explosives is the "most powerful" they have ever found in Darwin. The pair were charged with possessing explosives and remain in custody, police said. There is no word yet on what the charges may be. "We do have a good idea of what it is," Superintendent Brett Murphy told reporters today. "It is a very large amount of explosives. It is much more than what we've seen in recent years. "It is a very, very serious offence." The alleged attempted church bombing had been "very well planned", with the presence of three explosive devices found in a vehicle in Darwin, as well as in four other locations, and the evidence of "powerful enough" improvised explosives to damage a car. Police say the remains of the car and the explosive devices found in it were all purchased in Darwin in recent days. Officers have not ruled out the possibility of other suspects. "We are confident that this is the individual responsible," Superintendent Murphy said. "But at this stage, we have no evidence or suspicions about other individuals." Commander Matt McCabe told reporters that while bomb-making materials were found in the Darwin car, his staff had not found any bomb-making manuals or instructions. "It was not at that time clear to us what the objective of the person was when he carried out the offence," Commander McCabe said. The first two explosive devices found in Darwin involved a bottle containing fuel and batteries as well as a home-made fuse. A large "taser" e79caf774b
