Telecharger Patch Diagbox V701 Telecharger Patch Diagbox V701 Bio-Adhesives, coatings and sealants Bio-Adhesives Adhesives are the first contacts between a substrate and another material or between two substrates. There are many types of adhesives depending on application. For example, adhesives are used to bond layers together in a building, and are used to bond packaging materials together. Bio-adhesives use microorganisms, plants, and their enzymes to bond substrates together without the use of other materials. Bio-adhesives are very useful as they can be produced in a large quantity, and some can even be biodegradable. They also can be engineered to bond materials together in a specific manner, which is very useful for some applications. Most bio-adhesives are not applied directly to a surface, but instead are applied to the substrate of that surface and then are soaked in. A few bio-adhesives can be applied to a surface. Types of bio-adhesives Biological Â· Biological adhesives are natural adhesives. A biological adhesive can be classified as either a symbiotic adhesive or an endosymbiotic adhesive. A symbiotic adhesive uses microorganisms, plants, or their enzymes to bond materials together, while an endosymbiotic adhesive uses the products of a microorganism, plant, or their enzymes. Often, a bio-adhesive will utilize both biological and non-biological materials to bond two surfaces. Symbiotic Â· Symbiotic adhesives are natural adhesives and usually e79caf774b
