.A 3D-printed device that delivers drugs and cures cancer (updated) Commenters on our original story about this news article on 3D printing medical devices say that's a shortcoming of 3D printing technology -- as far as we know, researchers have never made a 3D-printed device that cures cancer. You can read the article below or click on the link here. We'll keep you posted on this technology as it develops. It's more interesting than just curing cancer. We can build patient specific implants to replace damaged joints or fix broken arms. This could be especially useful with those catastrophically injured in car accidents and other accidents. This isn't the first time we've seen reports of 3D printing for medical purposes. In 2011, 3D Systems announced a partnership with Harvard University to print a new type of lens replacement for the eye. These devices could be printed for people suffering from cataracts or other eye conditions. In 2010, researchers in Thailand, where the regulatory environment is more welcoming, 3D printed a fully functional kidney. This printed a device that not only removes stones, but also adds artificial blood-cleansing filters that help the kidney perform its vital function.

My goal is to bring you the latest urban legends, current events, and other bizarre happenings. Funny, strange, strange, weird, strange, and things you can't easily Google. I'm also a science writer, with a focus on astronomy, physics, and mathematics. I also have a toy review column called Toy Blade.

Q: Merge resulting data to one dataframe - Pandas I have a df containing dataframe1 and dataframe2. When I merge them by index, it's something like this:

This results in a merged df with just a shift of column names (as you can see here - However, this is not I want, as I want the resulting dataframe to contain only the columns which are in both dataframes. From this question it's recommended to add a
