And it will work on both local/in-home device (AWS IoT) and on the cloud. We know the IoT Hub Policy in Azure to only support send messages on events like device connection or disconnection or a sensor changed etc. So we were thinking to implement the SMS plan on Policy and try to send the message when there is an error or exception. Is it possible and how we can achieve this? A: You can still send a message on errors using Cloud Service EventHubs and Azure Functions. You could create a Function that creates an event. Trigger only when the event is not null (a real error in this case) As for working on both local and cloud it is easy, you just have to make sure to have the EventHub created in your Azure Account that has the IoT Hub connected. A: Unfortunately, at the moment you cannot do this. You can use Azure Functions to send an SMS to an external number. Note that you will have to set this up first on your IoT device. There is an ongoing discussion about this issue, and hopefully it will be added to the IoT hub within the next few months.

Bone metabolism is well-balanced through bone resorption and bone formation. Changes in bone metabolism such as aging, disuse and surgery cause diseases. When bone metabolism is unbalanced, various bone diseases will occur. In bone diseases, various cytokines, neurotransmitters and hormones which are activators for bone resorption or inhibitors for bone formation are affected. I have summarized from these viewpoints the actions of hormones and cytokines related to bone metabolism and their mechanism.
