lol, for some reason the header sent by the webserver looks different to me, so it was difficult to parse it. The solution was to change the text in the body from 7 to 9. A little script to do it can be found here. Edit: I also included a short Python script which can take care of it for you. IAV is a framework that lets anyone build their own mobile apps using modern programming language (Swift, Kotlin, etc.) and has similar capabilities to Ionic2 and

Cordova. It has wrappers for SQLite, Realm, AppSync, Google Cloud, Firebase, IBM Watson, and Stripe (as of writing). There are several use cases to using IAV (mobile user interfaces) Wrapping existing apps to use the IAV framework APIs. Build new apps quickly without re-learning the underlying APIs. Provide a clean transition from native mobile apps to Web apps (HTML5, Cordova, etc.).

Download the IAV framework here. #

Adding dependency To work with IAV, we'll need to add the IAV dependency to the starter and add the IAV framework to the dependencies in package.json. To add the IAV dependency to the starter, edit the package.json and add "iav-framework": "0.2.2" in the dependencies section. Checkout IAV here to see how the IAV framework has been implemented. # Adding a Service (Web App) to the Angular Web Site We will try to add a web app of our own. We will start with a very simple web app that takes an input and stores that input in a local SQLite database.

---

We will then add data to it and remove that data.

To start, we will add a new file called `db.service.ts` in `src/app` folder. Run the `ng build` command to generate a new Angular Web Site.

This command copies the `src/app` folder to `dist/app` folder. Copy the generated `dist/app` folder to the root of your Project folder. Then open the project folder in your favorite web browser. Fire up the Angular CLI and run the command `angular generate webapp db --theme dark` This command generates the following directory structure _ after adding the module, we need to import the DB service into our HomeModule.
