to link the calendar control to the selected cell, click on the drop down calendar, and from the link drop-down, select the cell where you want to display the dates. it doesn't have to be a cell range. you can also select the entire column. in this case, the drop down calendar will only show once, not for each cell of the whole column: after clicking ok, you'll find the selected cell containing the date picker control in a blue color, and the date appears on top of it. and that's all there is to it. now you can use the drop down calendar to select dates, and you can reference them in formulas. you can change the background color of the calendar control by using the option from the properties window. to change the color of the date picker calendar, click on the control and enter your desired color in the appearance window. similarly, you can resize the calendar using the option from the properties window. to change the size of the calendar control, double-click on the datepicker, then click properties. then, in the properties window, specify the height and width you want to see. to hide the calendar, right click on it, and select the option 'hide'. this will remove it from the sheet but will not change the visibility of the cell to 'unlocked' as you may want to have it for the next worksheet or just to make it unobtrusive. try the open microsoft.office.tools tool from the tools menu, then select customize and use the control to add the title and icon to your date picker. as a result, the control will now look like the one in the image above.
