New Yorkers have certainly become accustomed to their daily dose of current predictions, but the weather "guru" from which they get their forecasts is much less reliable. According to Chris Mooney, one of the guests on this week's "Bill Nye Saves the World," the "worst weather forecaster" in the U.S. is a guy named Fred Vallejo. Appearing on the January 21 episode, Mooney explained to the audience that Vallejo's "superpower" was predicting which way the wind blows, and he declared it's not that big of a deal. "

AMMAN — Several Syrians living in Jordan are refusing to leave their country to return to their homes in the war-torn eastern Ghouta, as the regime and its allies are shelling the area, a Jordanian security source told Syrian pro-government daily Al-Watan on Friday. It is feared that soon a ground assault on the area would begin, he said. "We are in a state of siege and there is a huge military presence in the surrounding areas," a resident of the town of Jibreen told the daily, adding that the Syrian army had set up checkpoints on the main roads leading to Ghouta, as well as checkpoints on the roads to the northern towns of al-Bab and Azaz, 50 kilometers west of the capital. "And there is no news of how to go back to our homes. They are shelling them, and they are only aiming at civilians," the source said. "Even if our homes are liberated, we will not be allowed to enter them," he added. Local sources told Al-Watan that the Syrian regime and its allies were shelling Jibreen, Zamalka, Harasta, Douma and Saqba, eastern Ghouta's main towns. It said that the situation in Ghouta had deteriorated since the start of the latest military campaign on the area on February 21, with the Syrian army and its allies demanding that the people in the area hand over their weapons and hand over all of their property and documents. "The army has set up checkpoints on the roads leading to Ghouta, and the residents are being asked to hand over their documents and weapons. If they refuse, they will be considered as traitors, and will be dealt with accordingly," the daily quoted an unnamed source in Jibreen as saying.
